

Sister Ann Collins (formerly Sister Lambert) – 60 Years

Sister Ann Collins, formerly Sister Lambert, has been engaged in the ministry of education, elementary and secondary, throughout her religious life.

“Working with the young involves more than classroom instruction or school administration,” explains Sister Ann. “The impact is far-reaching, opening the doors to work with families, Church, school organizations, and the wider community. I am always grateful to learn when former students or coworkers recognize the impact certain teachers or administrators had in the choices they made throughout their lives.”

Sister Ann has ministered at St. John the Evangelist, Greece; St. James, Waverly; St. Paul, Oswego; St. Ambrose, Rochester; and the Nazareth Schools. Currently, she works in the finance office of the Sisters of Saint Joseph.

Reflecting on her 60th Jubilee, Sister Ann notes why the SSJs are special. “To this day, I admire my Sisters in community, those who use their gifts and talents unstintingly in service to others, whether it be as educators, pastoral ministers, health care providers, or missionaries. I also admire the fact that each Sister has the freedom to invest herself in work that best expresses her God-given talents.”
